〔I〕 次の英文を読んで、問いに答えなさい。

Glastonbury Festival* is a five-day performing arts festival that is held ( 1 ) the end of June on a farm ( 2 ) the English countryside, near a village called Pilton. Although the festival is probably best known ( 3 ) pop and rock music, it also features many other kinds of music. Besides listening to the music, the audience can watch dance, theatre, and even circus performances.

The festival, ( 4 ) was originally known as Pilton Festival, was the idea of a local farmer and landowner called Michael Eavis. Mr. Eavis decided to start his own festival in 1970 after watching an open-air concert in Bath, a city which is not far from Pilton.

Glastonbury Festival is now one of the United Kingdom's most famous and most popular music festivals. In fact, it is so popular that music fans from all parts of the world travel all the way to UK for the sole purpose of attending it. In 2022, the festival was attended by around 200,000 people. It also attracts some of the biggest stars in the world of popular music. Among the artists who performed there in 2022 were Billie Eilish, Dave Grohl, and Paul McCartney. Since the festival lasts for five days, fans are allowed to camp overnight in certain fields on the farm. (A) However, it is not possible to rent a tent at the festival site, so everyone has to bring their own. The price of the entrance ticket includes free access to the camping fields, two of which are reserved for families.

Although Glastonbury Festival has been (B) hold most years since 1980, the festival could not go ahead in 2020 and 2021 due ( 5 ) the COVID-19 pandemic*. Also, about once every five years, the festival takes a break, so that the farmland, the local residents, and the festival organisers can have a rest.

Glastonbury Festival has become associated with rainy weather. In newspapers and on TV, it is common to see images of wet music fans standing in the rain, wearing plastic raincoats or holding umbrellas. Some years, the festival has been badly disrupted by the rain. In 2005, the rain was so intense that the fields became (C) flood, and many tents in the festival campsite were washed away.

(D) Glastonbury Festival has become an important event for music fans around the world, including Japanese fans. Some Japanese musical artists have performed at Glastonbury. These include Shibusashirazu Orchestra and Babymetal. It is even possible to watch some of the performances on Japanese satellite TV channels.
